

Brother Joe Smith - Researching Family History (on the cheap)

There are many websites out there which offer services to help people trace their family history. A less known one is familysearch.org. It is the biggest community run free website in the world. I have been using it for about three years. I'd like to share my search techniques, which could be applied to any such website and some of my adventures in my family history research.